With less pets vacationing with their owners in the coming year, respondents cited the top reasons for leaving their four-legged companions at home:

1. It's difficult to find a pet-friendly accommodation — 51%
2. It's a hassle to take a pet on vacation — 46%
3. It can be expensive taking a pet on vacation — 17%

Of those hitting the road with their pets in the next 12 months, they plan to stay in the following accommodations:

- Hotel — 64%
- Home of family or friends — 45%
- Vacation rental — 40 %

Twenty-two percent of pet owners admit they have snuck their four-legged friend into a hotel or B&B that was not pet-friendly.

"While most pet owners are passionate about their furry companions and prefer to take them along for the ride, they feel like they're barking up the wrong tree when it comes to finding pet-friendly properties," said Brooke Ferencsik, director of communications at TripAdvisor. "TripAdvisor travelers have helped throw pet-owners a bone by identifying some great animal-friendly accommodations, with many of the best in show on the West Coast."
